

THE GLOBE AND MAIL

"CANADA'S NATIONAL NEWSPAPER"

OCTOBER 5, 2015

POWER POINTS

HARVEY SCHACHTER

This is the latest news and information for workers and managers from across the Web universe, brought to you by Monday Morning Manager writer Harvey Schachter. Follow us on Twitter @Globe_Careers or join our Linked In group.

Dumping toxic workers pays off

Research by Kellogg School of Management professor Dylan Minor and talent management executive Michael Housman...

Support people to build trust

Consultant Michael Lee Stallard recommends learning from former baseball manager Joe Torre, who was cherished by his players because...

Severance deals do have benefits

The public dislikes the quarterly focus on earnings by top executives and the huge payouts they get after leaving office. But a study finds that CEOs with severance agreements are less inclined to opportunistic management – they're about 25 per cent less likely to cut R&D spending to meet quarterly financial demands. – The Accounting Review [link]